A: This should not be "index.php" per se, but "index" (with a capital I). And the rest of the file name is not right at all. It should be "somefile.php" The short tag () is usually a better idea than defining the short_open_tag = On; in php.ini. Either way, when doing something to it or trying to find it, make sure you use "index.php" and not "index" or "somefile.php". If this still doesn't work, you should try adding this: ini_set('display_errors', 1); error_reporting(E_ALL); In the php.ini file. Or this (in a.htaccess file): php_flag display_errors on Also make sure there is "php" in the beginning of the file. I think "echo" should be replaced by "print_r". Try using error_reporting(E_ALL); instead. A typical computer system stores data in a storage system. The storage system stores the data on a mass storage device, such as a hard disk drive. The mass storage device is typically a relatively slow-moving component of the computer system. The access time of a typical hard disk drive is typically 25 milliseconds. A hard disk drive is a physical device that stores the data to be accessed by the computer system. Typical memory devices typically have an access time of approximately 150 microseconds. Thus, the access time for a typical hard disk drive is approximately 1/400,000 of the access time for typical memory devices. However, the cost of typical hard disk drives is typically more than ten times greater than typical memory devices. To overcome the relatively long access time of typical hard disk drives, a typical computer system also may employ a data caching facility. The data caching facility typically comprises a high-speed memory, such as a volatile random access memory. A typical random access memory has an access time of approximately 250 to approximately 400 microseconds. The data caching facility comprises a relatively high-speed cache memory. The cache memory is typically formed of static random access memory (SRAM) cells. A cache memory typically has an access time of approximately 100 to approximately 200 microseconds. After receiving an access request, the data caching facility determines whether the data is resident in the cache memory.
