* Adobe Photoshop Elements Adobe's version of Photoshop is free and extremely affordable for designers that don't need the full Photoshop capability. Photoshop Elements is easy to learn, and it has all the same editing tools as Photoshop. It also has some features that Photoshop doesn't, like improving contrast, luminance and color, removing red-eye, and converting to grayscale images. Adobe offers a trial version of Photoshop for computer purchase with Elements. It's $4, Adobe makes no claim of compatibility with most other Adobe products, and neither does the Elements product. Both of these Photoshop images were changed using the same editing method and same tools. Adobe Photoshop Lightroom Photoshop isn't the only popular image manipulation program. Adobe also offers its own program, Adobe Lightroom, which is built in Photoshop Elements and is also available as a stand-alone program. It also runs on Macs as well as PCs. Lightroom is a light-weight photo management software that's easy to use and manages photos by sorting and categorizing them into collections. It saves every aspect of a photo, including exposure settings, copyright information, credits, location, and more. You can quickly grab a photo from Lightroom and edit it in Photoshop Elements or other programs. Adobe Lightroom is available as a free download or as a purchase of just $10, and that includes a full version of Photoshop Elements. You can transfer photos into Lightroom and Photoshop Elements just by dragging them into their respective folders.

Q: Passing parameters to shell script I have a shell script: #!/bin/sh #Set LD_LIBRARY_PATH and appDir export LD_LIBRARY_PATH=/Applications/Logitek/terra.app/Contents/Resources/ export AppDir=/Users/brandon/Desktop/dev/libraries APP_NAME=terello APP_SUBDIR=terello mkdir -p $AppDir/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR mv /Applications/Logitek/terra.app/Contents/Resources/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_NAME* $AppDir/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR This works fine, but I want to pass an environment variable to the script when it is run. Here is my attempt: #!/bin/sh #Set LD_LIBRARY_PATH and appDir export LD_LIBRARY_PATH=/Applications/Logitek/terra.app/Contents/Resources/ export AppDir=/Users/brandon/Desktop/dev/libraries APP_NAME=terello APP_SUBDIR=terello echo $APP_SUBDIR APP_NAME=$(echo $APP_SUBDIR) APP_SUBDIR=$(echo $APP_SUBDIR) mkdir -p $AppDir/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR mv /Applications/Logitek/terra.app/Contents/Resources/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_NAME* $AppDir/$APP_SUBDIR/$APP_SUBDIR Result: Error: null variable A: You're trying to use variable substitution (?) before you run the script, which has already been done and is trying to "confuse" you when you try to run the command. Your script: #!/bin/sh #Set LD_LIBRARY_PATH and appDir export LD_LIBRARY_PATH=/Applications/Logitek/terra.app/Contents/Resources/ export AppDir=/Users/brandon/Desktop/dev/

Q: Difference between the words "open", "opened", and "open" and "opened" There is a situation where I need to open the door/window, close the door/window and then lock the door/window. if "opened" what would be the correct sentence? if the boss is the still open if the boss is closed here is a basic understanding of my dictionary "open": "front door": "open": "open": the following is what I know from English grammar rule. Open: to set something wide open or to allow something to happen Closed: to set something very small opening or to stop something happening Can someone tell me how this sentence should be interpreted? To make it easier to understand, I also created an example sentence: Tsukuda is an office in the building near the front door. It's open from 9am to 5pm. It's still open/closed. A: Each of your three options can be taken as correct. I personally find myself using "open" a lot, as I never really consider "opened" to be preferable to "open". I think you're correct to think that open is the only possible continuation in your example sentence. Q: Is it possible to directly use an Oracle XMLType field in an XMLAGG function? I'm writing a PL/SQL function to create a table of a postgresql query result. e.g. from a SELECT * from table, I need a table (of varchar2s) with the following columns: id (1-based) header_1 header_2
